

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

November 26, 2007

Contact: Aria Alaudini
aalaudini@microcomcorp.com
(740) 548-6262 X 228

Microcom Introduces a Heavy-duty Kiosk Mechanism for Issuing Tickets, Labels, and Serial Numbered Media

Product designed for an international client who wanted a completely self-service and automated way to authenticate and issue automobile registration stickers

Lewis Center, Ohio—Printer manufacturer Microcom Corporation (www.microcomcorp.com) today unveiled an innovative and cost effective media dispenser for issuing controlled inventory at self-service kiosks.

James Larson, president and CEO of Microcom Corp, said the 428MD device will help its customer put drivers trying to renew their plates in the fast lane. "Our customer's kiosks streamline the renewal process and help drivers avoid the agony of standing in long slow moving lines at registrars' offices."

These kiosks will offer the ultimate in convenience by permitting vehicle owners to easily buy license plate stickers at a variety of locations and during non-traditional business hours.

The machines, to be deployed in about 70 locations, will be a part of the largest self-service kiosk network of its kind.

Microcom designed and manufactured a rugged and dependable media printer/dispenser equipped with a laser barcode scanner. Once a customer enters the required information at the kiosk and submits a payment, the barcode reader authenticates a registration sticker and dispenses it to the user.

The agency that approved the project is looking to leverage self-service technology in response to growth. "They simply are looking to find smart and efficient ways to help tackle the increase in customer volume, while at the same time decrease costs," Larson added.

"It will also provide the technology platform for officials to deliver future innovations aimed at improving customer service," he said.

About Microcom

Microcom Corporation is a privately held leading maker of specialty-use desktop and kiosk thermal printers and boarding gate readers employed throughout the world. We deliver innovative business management solutions such as bar code and ticket printers for transportation, healthcare, mail-sorting, and specialty printing industries. In addition, Microcom offers thermal tickets, labels, tags and other consumables. For more information, please visit www.microcomcorp.com.